The Third Time The Anti-Trust Lawyers Were Wrong!

Is it a crime to give people more good food for their money?

For 90 years A&P has devoted all its energies to this end.

For many months now the anti-trust lawyers from Washington have been giving stories to the newspapers, making speeches and talking over the radio about this company.

They have been making serious and damaging allegations about the methods that enable A&P to give its customers better food values.

We have already told you about other times the anti-trust lawyers made charges against us that were proved utterly false in court.

In the left-hand column on this page you can read what the federal judges had to say about those two cases.

Now we are going to tell you about the third time a federal judge decided against the anti-trust lawyers.

What Has Gone Before

Today's ad is the third in a series telling about times the anti-trust lawyers made serious and damaging charges against A&P that the courts decided were not true.

In the first ad in this series we told you about the time the anti-trust lawyers charged that A&P, and other good American citizens, conspired to fix the price of bread in Washington.

These charges were false.

That was the time Federal Judge T. Alan Goldsborough instructed the jury to bring in a verdict of "not guilty".

It was the time he said to the anti-trust lawyers:

"If you were to show this record to any experienced trial lawyer in the world, he would tell you that there was not any evidence at all."

"Honestly, I have never in my over forty years' experience seen tried a case that was as absolutely devoid of evidence as this. That is the honest truth. I have never seen one like it."

But that was not the only time the anti-trust lawyers made such serious "allegations" against A&P which were false.

In our second ad we told you about the time in Wilson, North Carolina, they charged A&P's fresh fruit and vegetable buying subsidiary, and other good American citizens, with conspiring to fix and depress prices paid farmers for potatoes in North Carolina, Virginia and Maryland.

Here again, as in the Washington bread case, the charges were false.

This was the time Federal Judge C. C. Wyche directed the jury to bring in a verdict of "not guilty".

It was the time he said to the anti-trust lawyers:

"I have studied this case from the very outset. In my opinion there is no testimony produced from which it can reasonably be inferred that the defendants entered into a combination to depress or lower the price of potatoes."

"I might say that I never tried a case in my life where a greater effort, more work, more investigation had been done, coming almost with a fine-tooth comb to gather evidence, as was done in this case."

"But, as was said a long time ago, you can't make brick without straw, and you can't make a case without facts."

So here were two cases in which the anti-trust lawyers made seriously damaging charges against A&P, in which the judge decided that there were no facts to support those charges.

Today, we want to tell you about the third time—this time in Dallas, Texas—the court decided against the anti-trust lawyers.

The Dallas Anti-Trust Suit

In 1942 the anti-trust lawyers went out to Dallas, Texas, 1,400 miles from the homes of most of the defendants, and instigated criminal charges against A&P.

About this case one thing was sure,

Their previous experience did not deter the anti-trust lawyers from making more inflammatory and damaging allegations, just as they had done before.

They made practically the same allegations they are making today.

Federal Judge W. H. Atwell ruled that the case should not even be tried. He said that the indictment contained inflammatory statements that he would not permit to be presented to a jury.

Judge Atwell said to the anti-trust lawyers:

"If I thought I was presiding over a court and that I might have to sentence some person because he was a great big fellow, or because he was a Lilliputian, I would feel like resigning. God knows we don't want it ever to occur in America that the size is going to determine whether a man is guilty or innocent."

Everything that has happened since this suit was filed proves that the American people don't want A&P destroyed.

A deluge of letters from people in all walks of life and thousands of editorials in newspapers and magazines convince us that the public has faith in A&P.

The housewives of this nation, whose patronage has made this company big, are buying from us in increasing numbers and increasing volume.

Our suppliers, whom the anti-trust lawyers allege we have exploited, are rushing to our support.

Labor leaders, mindful of the fact that A&P employees enjoy the best wages, hours and work conditions, are taking a stand against the suit.

Even many of our good competitors, who the anti-trust lawyers allege are hurt by our competition, have taken ads to tell the public that they don't like this attack on A&P.

All this indicates that the American people realize that the suit to destroy A&P is really a suit against efficiency, against low prices and against real competition.

Apparently most Americans do not want to let the anti-trust lawyers in Washington blow the whistle on any businessman who does a better and more efficient job and grows big in the process.

No one can make them believe it is a crime to try to sell the best quality food at the lowest possible price.

Judge Atwell also said to the anti-trust lawyers:

"If the indictment is not good then it is better to find out before an expensive trial than to find out after an expensive trial. I do not think it is good, and thinking that, it is my duty to sustain the demurrers and motion to quash."

In short, Federal Judge Atwell threw the anti-trust lawyers and their case right out of his court.

So that makes three times that the anti-trust lawyers made damaging allegations against A&P. In two of these federal judges said they were all wrong. In the third federal judge said that the indictment was inflammatory; he would not even permit the case to be tried.

The anti-trust lawyers were not satisfied with the Dallas decision.

Neither were they satisfied with the two other decisions which federal courts administered striking rebuffs to the

They were still determined to destroy A&P.

In our next ad we will tell you how they continued their campaign in this case in the Circuit Court of Appeals and subsequent proceedings. We will show you how, once again, they agreed with the courts.

Drive Your Golden Spike

A hundred years or so ago in the desolate vastness of the Great Lake Salt basin a little cluster of people gathered at a place called Promontory Point. Around them extending hundreds of miles in all directions was a awesome wilderness. The event has been dramatized countless times in stories, paintings and movies. It was the moment when the continent was first spanned with a railroad. Even in these days of heavy earth moving equipment construction of a railroad is a major achievement. Then with only hand and horsepower, it was nothing short of a miracle.

During World War II much publicity was attached to the construction of the Big and Little Inch pipe line from Texas to the East. Politicians said these projects were too big for private enterprise—only government could afford the expense. Yet last year when a single company began a pipe line from Texas to New York that was bigger and longer than the Inches—at a cost of 190,000,000—the event went almost unnoticed. Before 1954 the pipe line industry plans to lay nearly 18,000 miles at a cost of almost $2,000,000,000. Gas utilities will have to spend another $2,500,000,000 to handle the expanded supply. Also without fanfare the electric light and power industry is in the process of spending $10 billion to $15 billion for expansion of facilities. The railroads have spent since the war a cold $4,000,000,000 to expand and improve service. And in the same year the oil industry has spent several billions to keep pace with soaring demand. All of these billions have come from heavily taxed industries—not the government. These are productive billions that have lifted living standards, created jobs and new taxable income to help support government. They also helped to create new taxpaying businesses. There is no mystery about the miracles of America. This is the only major nation where groups of free citizens can drive their spikes and invest in new enterprises.

GRAPHS EXPLAIN TAX METHODS

Graphs reprinted by special permission of Newsweek Magazine.

DID YOU KNOW — ?

That for the small wage earner, hidden taxes—included in the price of nearly every commodity and service today—are worse than income taxes? Hidden taxes averaged $700 in 1949 for every family in the U.S.A.

That federal, state and local governments in 1949 collected $55,000,000,000 in taxes—approximately 25 per cent of our national income?

That in 1945, when 11,000,000 Americans were under arms, the same governments collected $52,500,000,000 in taxes—less than in the 1949 postwar year?

Hard to believe are these facts. But they are true.

Spending by government—whether federal, state or local—takes money away from every citizen. The money is collected directly or indirectly. The rich pay it, and so do the poor.

There is no Santa Claus at Washington, or Lansing, or county building, or city hall.

Fortune Smiles

By Richard Hill Whitman

CALEB WARE was a young man who quarreled with his father, and was turned away from his hometown home. Caleb always said later that he went away of his own accord.

Fortune smiled on Caleb. Five years later he found himself prominent in the affairs of the small town in which he had chosen to live. Moreover, he was rich.

It was then that Caleb decided to go home. As the train began to climb into the trestle, clear air of the mountain country, the crowd about his eyes vanished. Color appeared in his cheeks.

It thrilled him now to know that he was in a position to provide his father with all the comforts of old age.

He swung from the train at the tiny depot. Everything was the same, the cracker-box station, the general store, the postoffice and the few small dwelling houses.

A man with a white beard and spectacles peered at him from the doorway of the depot.

"Hello, Banty. Where's your rig?"

The man stepped through the door. "Caleb Ware! Know yuh anywhere? How be yuh, Caleb?"

"Tol'able, Caleb. Just tol'able. Figure on goin' out to the farm? Drive you out if you say so."

"I feared you would," he climbed into Banty's ancient rig, glad of this opportunity to ride with the satirical old man.

"Looks like you done quite well in the city," Banty suggested cautiously.

"Not bad," Caleb agreed. And he knew that feeling of triumph and victory at his success. He thought of his father's surprise and disappointment. It would be a bitter pill for old man Ware to swallow.

"How are things at the farm, Banty? How's dad?"

"Your dad's still," said Banty. "He ain't been right since you left five years ago."

"He left him? Why he turned me out?"

"Don't make no difference. You shouldn't do it. He needed you at the farm. The place is plumb run down, and your dad ain't well."

Caleb felt suddenly that that everyone in the village had condemned him.

"Dad isn't really bad, is he, too sick to work?" he asked.

"He is now. A month ago he was took bad. Ain't worked since." Banty spat and glanced at him sideways. "He won't be glad to see you, son, not like that. He's got too much pride."

CALEB UNDERSTOOD. He knew that his father would never take back a son who had deserted him, would never admit he needed the help of a traitor. He'd rather die starving than that.

Banty might have said more, but Caleb suddenly leaped from the slow moving buggy.

"You just keep on going, Banty, and forget you ever saw me. Dad need never know but what I come home because I had to."

Caleb plunged into the woods beside the road and discarded his hat and undid his necktie. He felt as if he were free.

TALL TIMBER TALES OF PETE

It has long been my contention that, for for sheer, steer for log, Michigan has made more and better drives than Texas, and piled up more sawdust than both Swift and Armour has hamburger, but of course I'm prejudiced. I wouldn't want to contend very loudly anywhere where most west of the Mississippi, but still think the Michigan Jack was as rugged and colorful as any western cowpuncher at least until Hollywood stepped in and made "strong silent men" of them.

However, knowing human nature as I do, I'd be stick to something I can prove. This little story is about one incident when east met west, and there was a lot of fun all round. It was on the 14th of July, 1920, a small cow-town in western Colorado, where among the hundreds of real cowboys, was a sprinkling of former Michigan lumberjacks like my self, who, tired of chasing the vanishing Michigan timberline had taken Horace Greeley's advice, and were trying to kick a fortune out of the sawbrush.

Charles Wilks was one of the former Michigan men who really gone western. He had a job on a cattle ranch, wore leather chaps and a pair of six guns that sagged his waistline. "I'd known him back in Michigan, and had hunted with him enough to know he was a crack rifle shot, but with those six-guns he was an amateur, and as such had to take a lot of kidding.

Charles could make it, he'd learned in Michigan lumber camp. He was able to dish it out, too. Then came the turkey-shoot at Dove Creek on the 4th of July, and Charles got his chance. Men lined up six deep at the stand to examine the shiny new 22-rifles that were to be used in the shoot, shaking their heads and laying them down. "Could n't use them fancy doodads. Might as well have a sling-shot. Why couldn't they use a man's gun?" The young man at the stand was adamant, and no fool. The turkey gobblers were strutting behind a barricade at twenty paces with only their heads in sight as they waited past a three foot opening, but there were men there who could drill six holes through that kind of a target in nothing flat. Charles just stood there listening to the beefing, with not a word.

Finally, as a joke, somebody pushed Charles up front. "Here, you take a crack at 'em, Charles, what you got to lose?" Attention was focused on Charles as he picked up one of the 22's and with a disgusted look laid it down again. "What's the matter, Charles, can't you shoot that either?"

Now I'd seen Charles shoot the heads off partridges sitting in high budding trees with a 22. He was a crack shot, playing a field. Somebody bet. Twenty

THE COST of our Nation's Security
...must be shared by ALL!
Unless all pay their fair share, you must pay MORE. Right now, Congress is considering increasing federal income taxes on present taxpayers to meet the terrific costs of paying for the last war ... guarding against another.
...yet some big business corporations pay little or NOTHING
Corporations engaged in commercial, profit-making business—such as Co-operatives, Foundations, even some colleges and universities—are permitted by law and outdated Treasury regulations to escape all or most of income taxes on business income and profits. The billion dollars a year that they are able to dodge in income taxes is now added onto what the rest of us must pay. Now Congress is being asked to add still more to the tax burden you are bearing.
